Editor's Column

Vacation time comes to editors, too.

This issue and the previous one were not the product of the inimitable team of Wilma and Cliff Cook, because they went off to see daughter Sunny, and her husband Don Matteson and grandchildren, Eric and Karen Lynn, in the state of Washington. Or maybe Washington State, since Professor Matteson teaches chemistry there. Right now is not only the best time to see people in Washington, but probably the only time one can do so without wearing hip-high wading boots and a snorkel. Not like Carmel, where on the foggiest days one can almost always see across the street.

Well, to get to the point, Newt Goodrich is taking charge of the mechanical end of the business, and I am upstairs in Wilma's little swivel chair. Marjory, Mary, Henry, Adele and Paul are quietly but firmly holding the business together.—Donald M. Craig

One reads the most interesting things in the press handouts from governmental sources.

The Board of Equalization says that 451,586,000 gallons of gasoline were sold in California in the past year, and that right along with it went 20,000,000 gallons of beer, 2,600,000 gallons of wine and 1,873,000 gallons of liquor. An explosive mixture, if we ever saw one. Director Robert McCarthy of the Department of Motor Vehicles thinks so too, for he has just issued a steaming message that "every person arrested for drunk driving after July 1 and subsequently convicted, will have his license suspended for at least six months. The minimum six months' suspension will apply to first of-

Farr's "Greenbelt" Bill On Governor's Desk

Senator Fred Farr's bill to permit cities and counties to purchase and preserve open spaces or "green-belts" for public use and enjoyment has been passed by both the senate and assembly, and now lies awaiting signature on the governor's desk. This bill will be the first such easement bill to be enacted in the United States, and marks a long step forward in civic improvement.

At the same time the "core committee" organized recently at the request of the Monterey Peninsula Area Planning Commission and devoted to the same problem, spent Tuesday night working through and adopting a policy statement submitted to it by Rear Admiral C. W. Fisher of Carmel, Harold Wright of Del Rey Oaks, and Grove Bishop of Pacific Grove.

The committee adopted a resolution that statements by any of its members were not to be construed as representing the position of the committee unless officially authorized by the committee. It

Humans Make It Hard On Sea Study, Marine Station Scientists Find

The pressure of human population has become too great for the famed Hopkins Marine Station. Dr. Lawrence R. Blinks, the station director, has had to announce that "with reluctance", the Pacific Grove Marine Research Center, a part of the Biological Sciences Department of Stanford University, is erecting a wire-mesh fence to protect its shoreline study area.

Like Point Lobos, the tidal area adjacent to the station is sacrosanct and not to be disturbed, and by a special section of the California Fish and Game Code it has been set aside as a marine refuge. Only scientists connected with the Marine Station and in the process of carrying out their studies are permitted to tamper with the plants or animals or fish in the refuge area and for 1,000 feet out to sea.

Scientific work in the past has been greatly aided because of the station's controlled shore, Dr. Blinks explained. These studies involve such problems as plant and animal inter-relationships, migrations, homing behavior and growth rates. Floats may be anchored offshore, or traps set on the bottom, to check events in these places.

If such researches are to yield accurate information, it is essential that rocks, tide pools, sandy shores, kelp beds and similar areas be kept completely undisturbed. Even walking over the rocks in test areas may disturb some studies.

"This work has become more and more difficult," he said. "Fishermen poach abalone and take other shell fish for bait, stones are turned over or collected by souvenir hunters, trash is thrown on rocks or into experimental pools.

"Imagine the joy of a child who takes away a bright blue starfish —and the dismay of the scientist who dyed it that way to track its migrations!

"Many good neighbors have

4th Of July On The Beach

The Glorious Fourth! What visions of blaring bands, flaunting banners, rhythmic stomping of marching feet, and tireless speakers upon bunting-draped platforms! Interminable waiting on crowded curbs, the smell of hot asphalt or dampened dust, the pressure of the crowd at one's back, the exhalted view from Father's shoulder!

The old vision becomes reality in Monterey and Seaside this week end. There will be heavily armed ships in the harbor, music and parades in the street. It will be good to see.

But . . . Carmel's traditional Fourth is quieter. And less conventional. And more intimate.

Fires will flare all along the beach, and over the sand, blown inland in the gathering dusk like a poisonous fog, will creep the oddly Oriental, sulphurous stench of firecrackers, and torpedos, and devil-chasers and Roman candles. Little kids will run about waving sparklers. And kicking sand on adults recumbent on blankets around the flaming driftwood.

There will be baskets laden with potato salad, and pickles, and hot dogs, and cake. And a dozen bottles of pop for the young ones. There will also be a quiet bottle of something else for the others.

Whether it is foggy and cold, or beautifully clear and crisp under the stars, the little fires will glow in the darkness, and sooner or later, the singing will start. The newest songs first, and then, inevitably, the old tunes that our mothers and grandmothers sang. The firelight and the night bring them out.

The children listen, grow drowsy and curl up under a blanket. The singers stop at last. The bottles are empty, the food is all eaten, the last of the firewood is dropping to embers.

The weary trek up the sand and the cliff begins, burdened with all the paraphernalia, back to the waiting autos or the quiet houses. Sleep-sodden little heads bob on their father's shoulders.

The fires die, and the ocean murmurs.

. . . It is the Fifth.

City Council Rides Again On Tree Tour

To arms! The city council will hold its tree, street, drainage, traffic and complaint receiving special meeting and tour of the town on Tuesday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock, and interested citizens are invited to appear in force at the following places and speak their piece.

The council will first repair to the corner of Dolores and Eighth to inspect the broken curbing at the Red Cross building. (Red Cross to pay for repair of same.) A step to the south will bring the party to the American Legion Hall where a similar curb problem awaits it. (Same financial arrangement, too.) Then on to San Carlos and Fifth at the Ricketts building to see how the sidewalk

Campbell Grips Gavel; Yates Board Secretary

At 8:00 o'clock yesterday morning in the cold, grey fog, the trustees of the Carmel School District met, elected officers for the coming year, welcomed their new member, awarded bids, set meeting dates and crept off sleepy-eyed back into the cold, grey fog.

Gordon Campbell was again elected president of the board on which he has served since 1950. Mrs. Dorothy von Meier, the former secretary of the body, having retired, George Yates, an investment broker, was elected to serve in that office. Incoming member Dr. Richard Snyder, a psychologist working with the Army at Fort Ord, was piped aboard with fitting

Post Office Rivals Vie For Blessing

Only two bids were submitted to the Post Office Department for the Carmel post office, and the city council and planning commission are not very happy about either. This did not prevent the proponents for the present site from proclaiming the merits of keeping the village post office and general meeting place exactly where it is, and the Fenton faction from urging that it be shifted to the northwest corner of Junipero and Seventh.

As for the Post Office Department, according to John McMahon, the San Francisco Regional Office's real estate man, both sites are acceptable, but the bids must be analyzed and submitted to the postal operations who will check the plans for workability. Washington itself will award the bid. "Ordinarily, it is a fairly simple matter", said McMahon, "but in Carmel the post office location is complicated by the scarcity of sites and the value of land." He did not mention the decisive impact of the mail boxes on the economy of the town.

Mayor Chitwood thanked the postal authorities for their sincere cooperation and consideration for the city's interests and then threw the floodgates open and asked for comments from the floor.

The first on his feet, by a narrow margin, was Tom Perry, speaking for Lee and Hanssens, the owners of the present post office, and, incidentally, for all the businesses between Fifth and Sixth on Dolores Street. Lee and Hanssens intend to expand behind three shops and make an entry on Dolores. If traffic congestion becomes too great, they have a plan for public parking.

Olof Dahlstrand, the architect for the Fenton property, then displayed drawings of the building proposed to house the new post office. Opening on Junipero, it would provide a level walk along the street or through the boardwalks behind the stores that will be built along Junipero and Ocean. There will be no need to destroy

Child Of Six Drowns In Carmel Lagoon

The body of six-and-a-half-year-old Steven Stier of Salinas was recovered from the Carmel River lagoon on Sunday evening at 7:20 o'clock, two and a half hours after his father, Douglas Stier, reported the boy missing. The Carmel Red Cross ambulance operated by volunteer members of the Carmel Fire Department took the body to the Peninsula Community Hospital at the request of Coroner Christopher Hill Jr. Death was caused by drowning, according to a later coroner's report.

The child was on a family outing with his parents and three brothers. Shortly after 4:00 o'clock Steven announced he was going swimming. About 15 minutes later his father saw him chasing a ball into the lagoon. Shortly after this the father became alarmed when he was unable to see the boy. He questioned persons on the

San Carlos	4	3

Pilot Market	2	5
Boys' Town	0	7

Tomorrow night at 6:00 o'clock Carmel's Little League championship will be decided when San Carlos Realty, first half winners, clash with Sport Shop, winners of the second half. The Sports finished an undefeated second half in grand style Tuesday night when they edged the hard-trying Wilder & Jones gang, 5 to 4, in a fast well-played game. Howdy King and Phil Van Dyne shared the pitching duties in notching the win and both are in top shape for Friday's playoff. Robin Smith and pitcher King both hit a double and single to lead the Sport batting attack. George Thaler pitched a steady game for the plumbers, allowing only six hits and no bases on balls. Greg Jones hit a pair of singles to lead the W&J hitters.

In the battle for the cellar, Pilot Market escaped the dark hole by slipping by Boys' Town, 8 to 7, in Friday night's game. The Market crew dropped behind by four runs early in the going but rallied in the late innings to edge the clothiers. Curt Mitchell drove in the winning run with a ringing single in the final heat.

Friday's playoff game is a battle between the Cinderella Sport Shop aggregation which shook off a last-place first half finish to roar back and go undefeated in the second half and the San Carlos Realty crew which is used to winning Little League games. Jack Miller's realtors won the 1957 title and have always played consistent baseball whether winning or losing. The winner of tomorrow night's game will qualify for the District Championships which are scheduled to be played at the Carmel Little League Park on July 7 and 8.

Representing the Sport Shop tomorrow night will be Howdy King, Phil Van Dyne, Holly Garcia, Robin Smith, Steve Halminski, Larry Thompson, Pat Woolsey, Tim Petersen, Ron Mumford, Mel Grimes, Rollie Champe and Louis Shone. Pete McArthur, a loyal member of the Sports, was sidelined by an injury early in the season but he will be rooting for his mates. Lew McCreery and Newt Goodrich guide the rags-to-riches gang.

VILLAGE INN WINS FARM TEAM TITLE

Managers Keo Fukagawa and Tony Klepich watched their Village Inn farm team club back up Steve King's four-hit pitching with a 13-run barrage and down the runner-up Derek Rayne aggregation, 13 to 4, to nail down the Little League Farm Team championship. In the consolation playoff last Saturday, Ewell Cole's Nikko squad outlasted Maurice Stoney's Special Delivery aggregation, 7 to 5, to cinch third place in the Farm Team League. While pitcher King was holding the Rayne hitters in check with 12 strikeouts, Pen Rose was giving him good bat support with a booming home run and a pair of singles.

CARMEL SWIMMERS DUNK WATSONVILLE, 199 to 168

Splashing to 23 first places, the Carmel Swim Club won its first meet of the current season last Saturday morning as it sank the Watsonville tank squad, 199 to 166, at the Watsonville pool. Coaches Don Smith and Bob Durbrow had their charges in top condition for

CONSTELLATIONS OF THE ZODIAC—CANCER, THE CRAB

By HOWELL ARMOR

The sign of Cancer, the Crab, June 22 to July 23, is the sign of Midsummer, beginning on Midsummer's Day, at the Summer solstice, when the sun is at its greatest height North of the celestial equator. It is governed by the Moon, so is called Moon Child, and is the sign of the breast.

The Chaldeans called it the Gate of Men whence the soul came to enter the breast and reside in the heart. The Egyptians regarded this constellation the sacred Scarab or beetle, symbol of eternal life. It is the symbol of generation, for it is in the house of the Moon, great Mother of all things upon the Earth, patroness of the life forces of Nature, Diana, moon goddess of the Greeks, Mother of the World. The sign is said to rule the tides of the sea, so is represented by the crab, depending on the tides for its food and protection when in soft shell. Some say the sign reminds us of the motion of the sun, crabbing across the sky in Summer. It is the keynote of the Royal Arch of Heaven, centered in the seven signs from Aries, sign of Spring, to Libra, first sign of Autumn, covering the six months the sun is in the North at meridian height.

The midsummer sign was one of rejoicing for the ancients, for the sun god was then in the height of his strength and glory. As he moved toward the short days of Winter, the people feared that he was deserting them forever, that he would never return.

It is difficult to see the creatures imagined by the ancients in the constellations of the zodiac. Even with a star chart, it is hard to identify more than the dippers, Orion and the Pleiades. But those people spent much time beneath the stars with no lights to dim their sight. Tales of the heavens were told over and over, and they came to know the gods and beasts and see them in the night sky.

July Meet at the Pacific Grove plunge. Carmel is the defending champion for this meet and will be out to make it two in a row this year.

CARMEL CRICKET CLUB TOO STRONG FOR SAN MATEO

Carmel's powerful Del Monte Cricket Club again demonstrated its devastating batting punch at the high school field last Sunday as it swept to a 158-96 win over the San Mateo Cricket Club. With Alfred Cooper showing the way on both offense and defense, the local cricketers took a commanding lead early in the match and coasted to their fourth straight victory. Cooper wielded the flat bat for 63 runs and took seven wickets while allowing 32 runs. In a recent match at Tilden Park in Berkeley, the Del Monte Club went over the 200-run mark as it was downing the Golden Gate Cricket Club in a league match.

BASEBALLERS ROLL TO S.F.

On Sunday 135 Little League players drove to San Francisco in four chartered buses to see the Philadelphia Phillies play the San Francisco Giants at Seals Stadium. The boys had their pictures taken with Richie Ashburn of the Phillies and Willie Kirkland, Giants' player. Arrangements for the expedition were made by Bob Connell, Francis Sparolini and John DuBets.

STREAMS DRYING FAST; NO MORE FISH PLANTED

Drying streams and rising water temperatures are forcing an early end to this year's trout planting on most streams and lakes in the coastal counties.

Only about 10 waters were still considered suitable for planting this week. Even these were subject to last minute cancellation, and several were not expected to remain in shape for the second round of planting, scheduled for mid-July.

The only hopeful note was that a return of cool, foggy weather might restore proper conditions on some coastal reservoirs.

South of the Bay, only the Big Sur and Carmel Rivers and Arroyo Seco Creek in Monterty County, and the San Lorenzo River, Bear, Fall and San Vicente creeks in Santa Cruz County remained on the planting list.

Whoops Is Maddest, Gayest Revue In Years

By MICHAEL BLANTON

Jerry De Bono's new musical revue, Whoops! is an evening of fun and laughs, by far one of the most hilarious shows to hit the Peninsula for a long time. This comedy is being presented at the Studio Theatre in Carmel by Betty Hackett and Royden Martin. Performances are given on alternating weeks, Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights at 8:30.

The seventeen riotous sketches in "Whoops!" were written and staged by Jerry De Bono. Mr. De Bono is himself a member of the cast, probably the most polished performer on the stage. His versatility is amazing; he writes, composes, sings, and acts. As the lead in one of the numbers, "The Dissipation Tango," he has a dynamic air reminiscent of Tom Lehrer; in another sketch, called Manhattan Flirts of 1932, his mood is light and farcical. But De Bono's finest contribution to the program is probably not through his participation (good though it is) but in the lyric score he wrote for the revue. Songs such as The Saga of Mary See and The Funnies deserve fame for their crispness and wit.

Neuri Arnold, as the revue's leading lady, is the delight of the show. Her roles as Miss Frump in The Old Man and the Lotus Land and as Giles in There Are No Small Parts are especially memorable. Yet her true worth as a comedienne comes out in Manhattan Flirts of 1932, in which she has the part of Sally Brown, the Country-Girl par excellence.

Sandra Six does a good job in Miss Saur Presents Miss Saur, a take-off on one of television's most applauded stars. Her appearance as Madam President of the Ladies Afternoon Cultural Fellowship (known to its tongue-weary members as LACF) is also notable.

Dorothy Percival, the Ice Cold Mama of the Alaska set, does a wonderful job in The Forty-Ninth State Cha-Cha-Cha. Other numbers in which she appeared were all the more enlivened because of her sparkling presence.

Frankie Dewey does marvelous things for the revue. A natural performer, she does work on Whoops! which sets the pace for the entire show. As a salesgirl presenting the Saga of Mary See she will be long remembered by her audience.

Pat Rafferty also gives a good performance. Her best work is probably as Viola Vance in Manhattan Flirts, but she is also enjoyable in The Funnies and There Are No Small Parts.

The male support cast is good, but not quite on the same level with its feminine counterpart. Probably of the four men who support Mr. De Bono (Cliff Berry, Mel Kirkpatrick, Jim Kohout, Don Osborn), Cliff Berry lends most to the overall gaiety of the evening. As Applause Man and Big Mouth he has a chance to show his natural acting talents.

Don Osborn's two best parts are Zitzfedder of the Follies and Sir Ralston in There Are No Small Parts. Osborn knows his acting and handles himself well. Mel Kirkpatrick and Jim Kohout also have minor parts and both do good jobs.

I recommend "Whoops!" to all who enjoy an evening of fun.

beach, then, at 4:45 o'clock called the sheriff's office. Officers Ed Thornburg, Ed Dinsmore and John Campbell answered the call.

Deputy John Campbell and the child's father questioned persons along the shore, in vain. In answer to the officers' call for a boat, Ade Bennett Sr. and his son Ade Jr. provided a dinghy. Ade Jr. took Stier out in the dinghy and at 7:20 o'clock he saw his son's body in about 9 feet of clear water within about 30 feet of the north shore of the lagoon.

Ade Bennett Sr. waded to the spot, recovered the body and took it to shore.

Apparently none of the more than 300 persons about the lagoon had seen Steven in the water or heard any call for help.

MINOR ACCIDENTS

Four Carmel persons were involved in two minor accidents yesterday afternoon and early this morning. There were no injuries.

At 12:15 o'clock yesterday afternoon Beverly Williams, Aspen Place, was driving east on Mesa Drive when Lemuel Cole, Route 1, going in the same direction pulled his parked car away from the curb 250 feet east of Atherton Drive. The two vehicles collided, according to the sheriff's office report.

At 2:10 o'clock this morning, Philip Coniglio, Route 3, was driving south on Highway 1. Charles Mulkey, Torres Street, who was following, hit Coniglio's station wagon in the rear 600 feet south of the Pacific Grove cutoff. Minor damage resulted, the sheriff's office reports.

used our paths for years without any damage," Dr. Blinks concluded, "and we have avoided building the fence long after we knew it must come. Much as we regret the necessity for it, scientific values come first."

The fence will be of the same type that surrounds the lighthouse area in Pacific Grove. Liberally posted with signs indicating it is a marine refuge, the fence will extend from the neighboring boatyard to the beach near the station entrance — a distance of some 500 feet.

A further portion of the refuge, which extends from the entrance along several hundred additional feet of shoreline, will be posted but not fenced for the present. It will probably be enclosed later, Dr. Blinks said.

He pointed out that the restrictions actually affect a very small segment of the Monterey Peninsula shores. Coastline belonging to federal, state and city governments, completely open to the public, extends for miles to the west.

Research at the Hopkins Marine Station enjoys an international reputation. Established in 1892, it is the oldest marine laboratory on the Pacific Coast and the third oldest in the country. It is situated on approximately ten acres of picturesque, rocky headland called Cabrillo Point or China Point.

has been disrupted by tree roots.

For the third time the council will look at the Santa Fe and Fourth wooded area through which the Fire Department wants to cut a street. Ten pines and 20 oaks would be lost in this questionable project. There are at present fire hydrants at both ends of the block in question, and no houses are isolated.

Somebody built a house at Guadalupe and Third with a driveway above grade, apparently without permission. Council will check. At Monterey and Second an old friend will await them: a venerable pine, frequently claimed to be "dangerous", but still bravely standing. Mission and First, the park site, the council will ponder topography, drainage and future utilization. (Francis Whitaker, please note.)

Two driveway variances are requested next, one at the Woods School for school buses and trucks, the other at Dolores and First because of practical difficulties.

The last item on the inspecting party's agenda is a combination tree-driveway problem. The council has already seen this twice, but there is a question regarding exposure of tree roots after building excavations have been completed.

Warshawsky Triumphs As Medea In Forest Theater

By VALENTINE MILLER

Robinson Jeffers' Medea is a fitting choice for this season's opening production at the Forest Theater, for it celebrates the work of Carmel's renowned poet and the founding, 50 years ago, of the historic open air theater. Here, under the tall pines and brooding sky, Friday's first night audience experienced a memorable evening.

Effectively directed by Bernard Szold, an excellent cast recreated, through Jeffers' great poetry, the tragedy of the hero Jason who wished for power and prestige, and his rejected wife Medea who craved revenge. Out of their mythological background these two emerge as living human beings caught in a web of love and betrayal, jealousy, hatred and revenge. This play strips emotion down to the bare bones and deals with acts of violence and horror; but through the sweep of his words Jeffers has preserved a sense of reality which is yet not quite reality. In short, he has preserved the myth. We are acutely aware of Medea's human predicament, but we are equally aware of the unseen but ever present pagan gods, of supernatural powers, and of a handful of mortals propelled by fate toward a disastrous end. This is the substance of all Greek tragedy.

Ruth Warshawsky's Medea was a masterly performance. She is an actress of great dramatic strength, perfectly cast in the role. Such is her versatility that the lightning changes of Medea's tormented and disordered mind — jealous wife, tender mother, spoiled child, — emerged with stark and frightening clarity. Jason, the weaker and less complex of the two protagonists, is a difficult part. His is a straightforward personality compared with Medea's devious and intricate one. This role was capably filled by Lloyd Jenkins, although he was quite naturally (and also because of the way Jeffers presents Jason) overshadowed by Medea herself.

Betty Fowlston, as the Nurse, handled her part with skill and depth; she was wonderfully convincing throughout the play. The three Corinthian Women, whose role is the traditional Chorus, played by Rosamond Beck-Meyer, Gertrude Chappell and Caroline Harriman, delighted the eye with their dance-like movements and the ear with their sensitive speaking of Jeffers' poetry. Miss Beck-Meyer, especially, through her exquisite diction and bodily grace, gave a luminous performance.

Bernard Szold, the play's director, made a forceful appearance as the arrogant King Creon. A brief but dramatic part as a slave was well handled by Lee Williams. The two little children of Medea and Jason, touchingly portrayed by Perla Armanasco and Jerry Zellhoefer, were a poignant contrast to the adults around them. The rest of the cast included David Walton as the childrens' Tutor, and Nick LeFeuvre as Aegus, King of Athens. Betty Baron and Jacqueline Clampett were attendants to Medea.

The production was beautifully staged. A stunning set, simple and somber, was designed and mounted by Ruth Allan. The costumes, supervised by Terry Eby, were magnificent, following a carefully thought-out pattern: for example, the brilliant green of Medea's dress and the scarlet of Jason's robe in contrast with the tawny-orange and earth-colored garments of the Chorus, the Nurse and the slaves. The movement of such colors against the stark gray set was a visual joy. Gerald Cummins, of the Dorothy Dean Studios, was responsible for the eurythmic "dances" of the Chorus, an aesthetic pleasure which also served as a balancing counterpoint to the violence of the main figures in the play.

Others responsible for the excellence of the production are Elvena Green, assistant to the director; Polly Bowhay, production assistant; Henry Dunakin, musical director; David Kirk, lighting; Betty Szold, make-up, and Camille Arsenault, wardrobe mistress. The one thing that seemed out of place to this reviewer was the choice of off-stage music; it might be felt that a more primitive kind of music, less sophisticated and using only two or three instruments, would be better suited to the spirit of the play. As a whole, however, Medea is an experience that for its powerful poetic words, visual beauty and generally fine acting, should not be missed.

Music On The Peninsula

By Mary Lindsay-Oliver

Sunday, at Nepenthe, restaurant just beyond Big Sur, another Bach program was given, this time by an ensemble composed of Raymond Fabrizio, flute; Mary James, viola; Donna Salarpi, violin; and Ellen Dessler, cello,—all excellent musicians. Instead of a piano as last time, a small harpsichord, more appropriate to Bach's period, had been placed on a high platform and was used throughout the program, which was clearly announced by William Fassett, owner of Nepenthe. A Trio Sonata by C. P. E. Bach for flute, viola and harpsichord opened at 4:00 o'clock with a considerable attendance that continued to increase. So adroitly is the place managed that no arrival attempts to enter or be served during a number, for everything can be as clearly heard in the wide open patio and with attentive listening a remarkably good atmosphere is created for the best of music. This has also surprised the passing travelers who come up from the highway. Fabrizio's fine fluting, and Mary James' mellow viola were heard again, as in the opening, in a J. S. Bach played by all four as the finale. In this Donna Salarpi's vital violin and Ellen Dressler's cello added greatly. Mary James and Margaret Fabrizio charmed with a J. S. Bach Sonata, and a solo Bach Partita was quite brilliantly played by Margaret Fabrizio on the harpsichord, which, as a pianist, she had never touched until a week previously.

It is hoped these informal concerts will continue at intervals and that Handel, whose two hundredth anniversary is celebrated this year, will have special attention at Nepenthe.

ASILOMAR MUSIC WORKSHOP

The American Symphony Orchestra League is now in full swing at Asilomar in its fourth season of Composers, Conductors and Orchestral Players Workshop which includes delegates from all over America and from Canada. Headed by Dr. Richard Lert, conductor of the Pasadena Symphony and Dr. Erno Daniel, conductor of Wichita Falls Symphony in Texas, as artistic directors with Mrs. Helen Thompson, the executive secretary of the League and administrative assistants that include Stanley Cummings of Carmel, Western Board member of the League, the participants already number over 150 with others to come. Included besides composers and conductors are concertmasters and conductors playing with the big ensemble.

Five of our good symphony players are among them, Elizabeth Du Val, H. H. M. Nicholas, Ronnie Cummings, Louise Friedhofer-Vadetsky and Marjorie Oren. Rehearsals started Saturday with Lert conducting the Tschaikowsky Fifth Symphony and Strauss' Tales of the Vienna Woods, and Daniel the Debussy Nocturnes. Sunday, Monday and Tuesday had two rehearsals each.

The public can only attend by invitation or at the concert at King Hall Friday, July 10. Individual memberships are, however, open to anyone by application to Mrs. Thompson at Asilomar.

Girl Crazy Opens This Evening At White Oaks

Girl Crazy, the Gershwin musical about the West, opens tonight at 8:30 o'clock in White Oaks Summer Theatre in Carmel Valley. The show will be repeated each evening through Sunday and again for four nights starting July 9.

Sunday evening the 50 backers of the summer stock venture were given a preview of the company's varied talents in Showcase I, a song and dance revue.

The White Oaks Summer Theatre company is youthful. Nucleus of the players is a group of young men and women who are graduates of San Francisco State College drama department. Added to these are a player from Hawaii, several from New York and two undergraduates at S.F.S. They live together, rehearse 12 to 14 hours a day, and combine enthusiasm with good theatre training. The result, judging from Sunday's preview, should be quick-paced, well-acted productions with expert lighting and superior dance numbers. Comedy is natural for these young people. Live music is provided by a pianist, bass player and drummer who accompany vocal soloists and chorus.

The theatre is a remodelled barn, and, again judging by Sunday evening's preview, a warm coat is advisable.—M.L.

FROM A LIBRARIAN'S NOTEBOOK

Ruth Galvin Thornburg, Librarian

We have new fiction this week, but for purposes of this piece we are going to ignore fiction and discuss only the non-fiction type of book, except for one mention of the fact that a copy of Niven Busch's new one entitled California Street goes into circulation this week. It will have a wide appeal for friends of the author who lives in nearby San Benito County. The book is a well written family chronicle which should prove entertaining to all. We are expecting a second copy from the County Library to help take care of the waiting list on it.

Easy books for checking up on certain questions of law are always useful and we have a new one entitled Handbook of Everyday Law by Martin Ross. The author teaches law to laymen at the College of the City of New York. The index is entirely too brief to my mind, but perhaps I'm the stuffy type who wants too long and involved indexing anyway. It's a habit librarians get into because they use indexes so much, and so often find them inadequate.

And while we are on the subject of law, we can move on to that of lawbreaking, and there we have a book on the Mafia, the organization identified with hatred and contempt for the law wherever found. It was written by Frederic Sondern, and entitled Brotherhood of Evil: the Mafia.

There are new biographies, one of which is about Madame de Lafayette. The wife of the man who fought with the colonists during the American Revolution was a person devoted both to her husband and her church. The story as it is told here is most concerned with the life of the Lafayette family after the return of the Marquis de Lafayette when our Revolution was over. It was written by Constance Wright.

Lawrence Welk has become a nationally known figure because of his radio and television work and the biography about him is entitled Mister Music Maker, Lawrence Welk. This is the family portrait sort of thing, unpretentious and wholesome. The sort of book we look for to give to students for book reviews, yet adults enjoy it too.

That imperceptible dulling of the faculty of hearing can be most distressing. This and other ear defects and diseases are discussed in a book by Dr. Norton Canfield entitled Hearing, a Handbook for Laymen. Many types of ear problems are handled in this small book, including the subject of emotional adjustment to the wearing of a hearing aid.

A charming book in many ways is Rain and the Feast of Stars by Reiko Hatsumi. This is a book of remembering of the childhood days in Japan. Even the makeup of the book is different and beautiful because it is printed in blue ink on creamy paper with delightful illustrations done by Jeanyee Wong. Read it for pleasure both to the eye and to the mind.

So don't just sit there . . . read something!

FROM NATURE'S SCORE

My restless mind responds to themes of waves
Which open silver petals where the tide
Upholds green calyses to bloom beside
The fog-pearled cliffs and edge the jasper caves.
The minor chords which echo through the naves
Of ancient pines, as wind-charmed boughs confide
Their tales of peace, destroy restraints which hide
A buried grief, the calm my spirit craves.
A forest's silence stills the need for thought
When one by one the leaves of autumn fall
Like hours content to follow destiny.
I loose my grasping hands which vainly sought
To hold a vanished dream and heed the call
To rest in nature's own antiphony.

—LAURA JANET LARSON

A HANDFUL OF HOKKU

LIQUIDAMBER TREE

The name a lyric,
and what poetry in leaves
of autumn amber.

CROESUS

Carelessly he heaps his raked-up gold into piles—

OCTOBER HICKORY

Flames from sun-yellow
mockernut hickory leaves kindle fire in us.

LAMENT FOR SUMMER

All is the same, yet there is that which grieves—
Inherent sorrow as a presence moves
Behind the innocent beauty of each flower—
Unstaying time by turn reclaims each gift.
The hills are dry, the laughing river, dust . . .
The birds grow restless, seldom moved to song;
Patience replies to promise, peace to life,
And all that once looked skyward leans to earth.

Summer goes down with winter at its heart—
The year declines, the glory slips away.
Essence endures and centers in the seed—
The cycle closes, self-impelled, self-sealed.
Time is its own destroyer; its own deeds
Are cancelled out; the focus moves beyond.

Jazz Poetry Reading For The Beat and Unbeat

By MICHAEL BLANTON

Despite a rather small attendance, the Jazz Poetry Concert presented June 2 at Sunset Auditorium was definitely a worthwhile and enjoyable experience. Represented in the audience were both the "beat" and the "unbeat" of Carmel's literary world, and both groups were delighted, startled, and amused by the work read and the performances given.

The origins of jazz poetry as an art form are much disputed, as both Kenneth Patchen and Kenneth Rexroth claim to have begun the movement. At any rate, it seems fairly certain that the first time jazz poetry was heard publicly in the Bay Area was during 1952, when Patchen's taped readings were played there over the radio. The movement has taken many forms, yet the standard method is for a six-piece jazz band to accompany the reader with its improvised mood music. Experimental work has even been done with jazz drums and flute or recorder as background for reading. The presentation at Sunset included three different readers, with an onstage bass plucked and thumped as accompaniment.

It was probably in the first reader of the evening, William Margolis, that we heard the best example of jazz poetry and its possibilities. Margolis read a long poem, "The Hegira Cycle", from his own work. Immediately the audience was aware of a powerful free meter in Margolis' poetry, a meter which was accentuated and enhanced by the counter-play from the accompanying bass. Margolis is a good poet, if perhaps an unoriginal one. "The Hegira Cycle" presents a typical theme in beat poetry, the flight of the individual from a world which he sees as lost into a super-reality of his own. The motif and imagery selected by Margolis in this description of New York as a city of organized insanity is highly reminiscent of the Spanish poet Garcia Lorca's work, Poet in New York. In the end Margolis gives us a significant line which might well serve as a dictum for all of us, beat or unbeat, who see the world as filled with degradation and corruption. The line, reiterated again and again by the poet, is "It's all a matter of how you look at it.".

If Margolis shows us a world universal in its application, Bob Kaufman, the second reader of the evening, depicts in his poetry a more personal, and therefore more meaningful, world. Yet the performance given by Kaufman was rather ragged. The play between reader and instrumentalist was less well-paced, not so dramatic as with Margolis. Some of Kaufman's work is deeply lyrical, as in the poem, The Eyes, Too, while other verse he read was only confusing and full of vague, conflicting images. The main idea behind much of Kaufman's poetry is a description of "beat" as a jazz idea, and that beat poetry is an expression of jazz.

The most enjoyable performance of the evening was given by Jack Taylor, listed in the program as The Jazz Poetry Reader. Taylor has an easy, professional manner and is quite capable of holding an audience. His reading of various selections from other poets provided an interesting contrast to the work read earlier in the program. The audience was amused at passages by Gertrude Stein and startled by Walt Whitman's Song of Myself presented with the jazz background.

Probably the most impressive performer throughout the program was Max Harstein, whose improvisations on the bass were never heavy yet always appropriate and interpretive.

The program, well selected as it obviously was, provided some very enjoyable insights into the current literary scene. Jazz poetry is proving its worth.

Maravillas Presented A Night of Flamenco Art

Flamenco dancer Luisa and guitarist Daniel Maravilla, with reputations gained in Spain, Mexico and the United States, occupied the stage of Sunset School Saturday night. With them, as specialty numbers were Chinin de Triana, a gypsy singer with the popular Jose Greco Ballet that performed here last season, and Tony Weaver, a Carmel student of Daniel Maravilla. Senor Maravilla lives and teaches in Carmel. The program was presented by D. Pohren.

This was Tony's first concert solo appearance and he acquitted himself with credit. He also formed part of the ensemble presentations.

The various rhythms and passions so flexibly expressed by Luisa's talent drew great enthusiasm from the audience. Her dances covered a wide range of Spanish localities, historical backgrounds and developments embellished by her many colorful costumes.

All the numbers were well performed with spirit and character, as were the guitar solos by Daniel Maravilla, but, for this reviewer, there is inevitable a monotony of guitar tonality and flamenco style that should guard against long programs, especially if the personnel is limited. The whole atmosphere of the Spanish dancing would be greatly enhanced by a more suggestive backdrop; the bare boards of a school stage detract from the atmosphere that the artists wish to convey.

However, imagination was helped by the lighting, and the singing of Chinin de Triana, whose vitally strident voice, used with both passion and pathos, won audience acclaim for its intensely flamenco quality.

Naturally, the local enthusiasts of Spanish music and dancing welcome this most typical entertainment, and the performers were heartily applauded.—M. L-O.

Carol Ann Bratton Wed

The Berkeley Chamber Singers chanted a plainsong during the wedding of Carol Ann Bratton to John Henry Lienhard on June 20 in All Saints' Episcopal Church. The group also sang while guests assembled for the ceremony performed by the Reverend David Hill.

The bride wore an antique satin gown embroidered with seed pearls. Her veil was cathedral length and she carried a cascade bouquet of white orchids and carnations.

She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Earl Sanford Smith of St. Louis, Missouri, who wore a chartreuse taffeta empire gown and carried a sheaf of yellow gladioli and white carnations.

Balray Sehgal of Delhi, India, was best man for the groom.

The reception following the marriage was held in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Spence Bratton of Carmel Woods.

Mrs. Bratton received the guests wearing a French blue sheath dress printed with chartreuse and pink roses and a corsage of gold cymbidium orchids.

After a honeymoon in Canada and the Western States the bride and groom will live in Berkeley while the groom studies for a doctor's degree in engineering and the bride for a master's degree in music.

The bride attended the University of Tulsa and was a member of the Tulsa Symphony Orchestra. She received her bachelor's degree in music from the University of Washington. She teaches music in the Bay area and plays with the Oakland Symphony Orchestra.

Her husband, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Henry Lienhard III of Portland, Oregon, obtained a B.Sc. degree at Oregon State University and his master's degree from the University of Washington. After Army service he returned to Washington as an instructor.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERMON

Man's divine right to freedom and strength will be brought out Sunday at Christian Science services.

Scriptural readings in the Lesson-Sermon entitled "God" will include the Apostle Paul's counsel to the Galatians (5:1): "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage."

Also emphasizing man's right to freedom is this correlative passage to be read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy (228:14-15): "Mortals will some day assert their freedom in the name of Almighty God."

The Golden Text is from Psalms (46:1): "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble."

Sunset Teachers' Vacations

Two Sunset School faculty members will spend the summer in Europe, one in Hawaii, the rest, except for short trips, plan to remain in Carmel. Two of this latter group are teaching in Carmel Unified School District's first summer school program.

Sunset Principal Orville Rogers reports that he will be at his desk all summer, week ends he will build a patio, retaining wall and fence at his home.

Arthur Hull, eighth grade teacher, will be on active duty with the Army for two weeks of his vacation. He is also going to paint his house, take a few short jaunts and catch up on his reading.

Neil Jensen, eighth grade, plans a couple of weeks' vacation at Clear Lake, fishing, boating, skiing and swimming with his family. Mrs. Beatrice Picard, also eighth grade, will remain in Carmel.

Mrs. Sarah Sproull, seventh grade, is going on a six-weeks' tour of Europe, sponsored by San Jose State College in connection with a course on comparative education.

Mrs. Thelma Stohr, seventh grade, will spend her summer holidays in Carmel. She expects visitors during the summer and will probably go on short trips in California and to Oregon.

Mrs. Beatrice Wiegman, seventh grade, is teaching French in the summer school program.

Bruce Duncan, seventh grade, has left to tour Europe on a "shoestring." He plans to take pictures, visit schools of science and "soak up culture." He also plans to visit relatives in Scotland.

Mrs. Diane Du Bois Finch is teaching reading in the summer school here. She teaches sixth grade at Sunset.

Miss Sally McPhail, sixth grade, will visit national parks.

Neil Smith, sixth grade, will "partly — work, gloriously loaf, go camping and read."

Summer session at the University of Hawaii is how sixth grade teacher Harvey Bennett will spend the firist part of the summer. During the remainder of his vacation he will visit his parents and friends in Southern California.

Joe Broadman, Sunset art teacher, will attend Hartnell College, paint pictures and "grow food" in his garden.

Music and physical education instructor Arthur Holman will be in Carmel except for a short trip to visit a college coach to discuss new training methods and techniques.

A Carmel summer is the vacation planned by industrial arts teacher Kenneth Wiese.

Postcard From The Reimers

A postcard from Mr. and Mrs. Niels Reimers has a picture of the steepest path we have seen, carved out of what looks to be at least a mile-high cliff and leading from a small landing on a rocky shoreline to a barren rim of the world.

The message is "I was up there at midnight." Written above the message is 70°10'21". Helped by this and a fine Norge stamp with Nordkapp printed at the top of a steeper-than-Gibraltar headland, we deduce that Mr. or Mrs. Reimers had landed on the rocky beach, climbed the steep cliff and seen the midnight sun from North Cape on North Mageroy Island in the Arctic Ocean off the North coast of Norway, the northernmost point of Europe. Because the postmark is Nordkapp we also deduce that in the cluster of a half-dozen buildings at the foot of the path there is a post office. So our card from the Reimers came from the northernmost tip of Europe. We are doffing our deerstalker, Dr. Watson.

Mrs. Jack Hovick is general chairman for the summer movie project. She will be assisted by Mrs. Roderick Dewar, Mrs. Lou Rudolph and Mrs. Loran List Jr.

postponed decision on a resolution which urged an immediate statement of position by the Area Planning Commission regarding "green belts", area density, control of subdivisions, commercial land use, and highway planning.

The committee strongly endorsed the view that no one community or group should gain dominance over others, but "that at all times, the importance of the area viewpoint should be recognized."

The committee is composed of five members from each of the peninsula communities, and five from the county area here, and its principal function is to act as an advisory body to the official bodies of the cities and county.

For example: 1 acre with beautiful oaks and fine building site, $5,500.
1 acre with fine view of hills and a peek at the ocean, $8,000.
1.61 acres with ocean and valley views, $8,500.
1 acre, nearly level, with ocean and valley views, $10,500.
1 acre, nearly level, secluded, lots of trees, $6,500.

These lots are about 5 minutes' drive from town and most of them are available on terms with 25% down, if desired.

1 ACRE ON CARMEL RIVER, 2½ MILES FROM TOWN—$7,500, $500 DOWN.

We can't say much more than that—except that there are trees on the lot and the monthly payments can be as low as $75.00. (If you're a contractor, we can get you a year's full subordination on this one.)

VERY EXPENSIVE VIEW LOT

If you're a millionaire, or close to it, we have an exceptional piece of view property on Carmel Point, and another one in Pebble Beach. Both pieces have magnificent ocean views, and both are quite large in size. If desired, we might be able to arrange terms on these.

Pull Devil; Pull Baker At Joint Meeting On Post Office's Site

the "sylvan glade" appearance of Junipero; its divided street would actually help solve the traffic problem. According to his surveys, there is more room for parking in the 200 feet adjacent to the corner of Junipero and Seventh than in the present post office parking lot (city owned, cost $55,000), plus additional parking in the occupied center of the Fenton block. Besides, the location had the virtue of being fronted by residential property which could not develop commercially and create additional traffic problems. All the other area surrounding the proposed site is developed except the Fenton property and should not generate more traffic than at present. As for the traffic on Ocean Avenue, the new site will be 350 feet from that intersection.

Patricia Hall was forthright in her condemnation of the present post office site. "The present post office is miserably located! The steep hill is a constant traffic hazard. This new plan is intelligently planned, and I hope this wonderful scheme is adopted." (Cheers and handclapping.) Mrs. Alva Jensen heartily seconded her. "It is a bottleneck now, and it will get worse, not better. If we do not take advantage of the Fenton plan, this beautiful space will be lost to us. Then the post office will be forced into a less suitable site up the hill" (prolonged cheers and handclapping).

Alton Walker, speaking as an unofficial representative for the Presbyterian church across the street, was worried about the parking for the church members if the post office goes into the new location. Besides, it appeared to him morally wrong for the site to be changed frequently. "It inflates and deflates property values with every move."

There then followed a gentlemanly but spirited exchange of opinions, heavily biased on both sides, between Mr. Clark of the Fenton interests, and various shop and property owners near the present post office, headed by Rollo Payne.

Payne's point of view was that traffic is heavier on Ocean Avenue than on Dolores Street, and that parking would be more difficult to find on Junipero. This brought Patricia Hall to her feet. "Mr. Payne talked a lot of nonsense. At 9:00 o'clock in the morning, all those little stores have taken all the parking spaces near the post office. There is very little thereafter."

Colonel De Camp advised a survey of traffic at Junipero and Ocean. "You take your life in your life in your hands making a turn there. It's the most dangerous juncture in Carmel", he stated.

Then up rose P. A. McCreery. Solemnly he warned the city that its insurance carriers are in serious debate as to whether to renew the city's policy. It is McCreery's point that it is not the auto that is costly to the city, but the pedestrian, and the change of location will mean an up-swing in insurance rates because of additional pedestrian hazards, specifically, the children going to Sunset School.

Reluctantly the flow of views stopped when the mayor closed the meeting to public comment. Then the council members opened up. Allen Knight had a long list of unfavorable factors relating to the Fenton site. "Junipero Street will have to be improved against the wishes of its residents; the residential nature of the street will be disturbed; the city has a responsibility to maintain present area because of financial effect on people in business there; there will be tree damage on Junipero; people are used to the present post office traffic pattern; Seventh and Mission is a bad traffic accident area; merchants have a more central location now for their mail."

May was all for refusing both sites in favor of a better one, unspecified but apparently no secret to the council.

Norberg stated that his opposition to the development of the Fenton area by chain stores was well-known, but that the interests of all Carmel come first. Considering the parking, and the pedestrian interest, and the traffic, "and taking one thing with another, I would have to be in favor of the location in the Fenton block."

The planning commissioners were more reticent. Mrs. Josselyn suggested they meet on the matter as soon as possible and George Willox adjourned the Planning Commission to a meeting on July 6 at 7:30 o'clock.

Mr. McMahon said that a decision on the city's recommendation within about two weeks would be agreeable, and the meeting was adjourned.

The city now may recommend either of the two sites, or disapprove of both, and the Post Office Department may accept either, with or without the city's approval, or it may throw both out and reopen the bidding in six months. In any case, the present lease expires in 1961.

Campbell Grips Gavel; Yates Board Secretary

ceremony, and the festivities were over.

The day's work began. The trustees bought $6,103 worth of kitchen equipment and utensils for the recently constructed cafeteria at the River Elementary School, and then voted to buy a diesel engine for the new 91 passenger school bus. The price of the diesel engine exceeds that of a gasoline motor by $2,662 but the fuel costs and maintenance of the diesel will, the board feels, more than make up the difference.

New athletic and playground gear cost another $8,258.71.

Although the board will continue to hold its regular monthly meetings on the fourth Thursday of each month in the high school library, it named te second Thursday as an additional meeting day. School business demands more time than the regular meetings can give it, and the calling of special meetings sometimes occasions time conflicts. The board therefore feels that an additional regularly scheduled meeting will eliminate confusion and increase efficiency.

Editor's Column

fenders, who in the past have been escaping with light suspensions or none at all."

According to the director, 27 persons were killed and 133 injured on the Memorial Day outing, and he fears that the coming Fourth of July will be no better.

"The time for slogans in our efforts to pound some sense into the heads of irresponsible drivers is past," he says. "It is becoming more and more obvious that drastic action is the only answer to our traffic accident problem."

We don't know what your idea of "drastic action" is, but according to some of our widely-traveled friends, the Swiss have a system that might work here. If you drink and drive there, your car is impounded for six months; if you are nabbed a second time on this charge your car is sold and the money goes into the public treasury. (How many people would this have hit in Carmel? In May, two and in June, three.)

That is what we would call "drastic" and effective. If course, it would be a "hardship", but what punishment isn't? The revocation of a license here is often not a deterrent at all, for the person simply drives without a permit and takes the risk.

Unfortunately, we can think of some difficulties in applying the Swiss remedy here, but on the other hand, there is a bright note: it might restore prosperity to the desperate automobile industry by upping the demand about ten percent.
